Anno. 1559.

And one of the angels (sayeth S. Iho) spake, sayinge vnto me: what are theis whiche are arayed in longe whyte Garmentes, and whence came they (before the people before sealed by the angel) And I said vnto him: Lorde thou woteſt, and he saied vnto me, theſe are thei which [illegible] of great tribulatiō, and washed their garmentes, and made theym whyte by the blode of the lambe, therefore are thei in the presence of the Throne of GOD, and serue him day and nyght in his Temple, and he that sytteth in the Throne shall dwell amonge them.

To the righte honorrable Lorde Par. Marques of Northamp-ton: Thomas Bryce, your lordshippes dayly Orator, wisheth cõtinuall encrease of grace, concorde, & consolation in hym that is, was, and is to come, euen the first and the laste. AMEN.

IT maie please your goodnesse (honorable Lorde) to receiue in good parte, the little labour of my pen, whiche, albe it the rudenes & quantite therof, procureth not to be dedicate to so honourable a personage, yet the matter it self is of soche worthines, as duely deserueth to be grauen in golde, but who goeth about so finely to depict with Appelles instrumẽte this lated Regester, thinkyng to excede the rest, not I poor wretch because I am assured, that soch a worthie woorke, as thereof maie bee written, can not, neither shall passe vntouched, emong so many godlie learned, but were it, that no man hereafter shuld in more ample and learned maner set foorthe the same, yet should my presumpt-tion (if I so mente) bee tourned to reproche, for this I beleue, that thei be in soche sorte regestred in the booke of the liuing, as passeth either pen, ynke, or memorie to declare. This my simplicitie, and to bolde attẽpt might moue your honor to cõiecture in me moche rudenesse, or at the least might perswade me so to thinke, but that experience rience hath shewed me, the humilitie, and gentlenes, of your long tried pacience, the certain knowledge whereof, hath pricked me forwarde, in this my pretence: and beyng thereto requested of a faithfull brother & frend, I haue with more industrie then learnyng (God knoweth) finished the same, which beyng (as I thought) brought to good ende, I desired according to the accustomed maner, to dedicate the same, vnto soche one, as would not contẽpne, so simple a gift. And callyng you to mind (right honorable lord) I knewe none more mete, first bicause youre knowledge in Christe, teacheth you the same godlie, & vertuous life, whiche not onely your lordship, but al other honorable. &c. oughte to ensue. Secondly, bicause these late yeres you haue had good experiẽce, of the troubles, and miseries of the faithful, which haue patiently embraced in their armes, the comfortable (although painefull) crosse of Christ, which in so great a nũbre is commonly not so plenteous, as commendable, but what stand I praising this pacience in them (whiche yet deserueth the same) seing ỹ mighty god & his christ, hath prepared frõ euerlastyng, for soche a glorious, rich, & incomprehensible croune of felicitie, & continual cõforte. This my short & simple worke, I commẽde and dedicate, vnto youre Lordeship, crauynge pardon at your

handes, for this my to homely and rude enterprise, cõsidering that albeit golden frute ware offered in Peuter, and by the handes of a simple man, yet is the frute notwithstandyng stil precious, and neither abased by the Peuter or giuer, euen so (honorable Lorde) though the verses be simple, and the giuer vnworthy, yet the frute or matter, is precious, comfortable, and good: The order to attaine to the perfecte vnderstandyng of my mynde, in settyng forthe thesame, with figures and letters, shal largely appere in this booke, whiche I haue not onely dooen, to make plaine vnto your honour, the yere, moneth and daie, but also to all other, that hereafter shall read it, for that I doe pretend (if God and fauour will permit it) to vse the same as comō to the profit of al for which cause I haue al so, placed a preface to ỹ reader: But that it maye please youre honor (in respecte of the premises) to extende youre fauourable assistaunce, to the manifest setting forth of thys short and simple worke, to the glorye of the great and myghtie God, to the comfort of christians, I as vnworthye and to bolde a suter most humbly craueth your Lordshyps ayde and supportation in the same, especiallye to beare the rudenesse of my vnlearned style (which alas I lament). But nowe ceassyng to trouble your Lordshyppe anye longer, this shall bee my continuall nuall praier for you. The wise-dome of GOD, direct your honour, the mercie of God, giue you spirituall power, the holie ghost guide and comforte you with all fulnes of consolation in Christe

Jesus.

tour Thomas Brice.

To the gentle Reader mercye and peace.

May it please the (gentle reader) to take in good woorth, thys shorte and simple regester, conteyning the names of diuers (althoughe not all) bothe men, women, and virgins, &c. Which for the profession of Christ their Capitaine, haue been moste miserablie afflicted, tormented, and prisoned, and in fine either died (by some occasion) in prison, or els erected in the charret of Elias since the .iiii. day of February .M.D.L.b. to the .xvii. daye of Nouember. M.D.L.viii. wherein accordynge to the determinacion of our louynge a most most merciful father our long wished for, and moste noble Queene Elizabeth, was placed Gouernelle and Queene by generall Proclamacion, to the greate comfort of all trew Englishe hearties.

This I commit to thy frendlye acceptacio and fauourable scanninge (gentle reader) and all be it, I doubt not, but some of godly zeale both wise & learned, wil not neglect hereafter, to set forth so worthy a worke, namelye of the martyrdome, and pacient sufferynges of Christes electe members, and also of the tyrannicall Tragedies, of the vnmercifull ministers of Sathan, yet at the requeste of a dere frend, to whom loue and nature hathe linked

The maner how to vnderstande the letters and fygures.

IN primus, the fygures, whyche are alwayes foure in nũbre, and ar placed in the myddle of the two strykes, whyche goe betwene the verses, within two short strikes, signifie the yere, wherein those persones were slayne vnder them conteyned. And wher you see a lytle crosse on the out syde of the outmost lyne, on the syde of the booke, it signifieth the chaungyng of the yere, as from .M. .D. .L. iiii. to .M. .D. .L. v. and in lucy maner, the letters which stand in the lytle square place, on the right side of the booke, signifi-eth the moneth wherein they died, and for the playner vnderstandynge thereof, I haue vsed twelue Letters, for the twelue Monethes, that is A. for Januarye, B. for Februarye, C. for Marche, D. for Aprill, E. for May, F. for June, G. for July, H for August, I. for Septēber, K. for October, L. for Nouēber, M for Decēber. But where one letter standeth in ỹ litle square place, & an other is placed vnder it, betwene the twoo lynes before ỹ verse be ended, it signifieth the chaūgyng of the mo-neth, so that the person or per-sones, where againste the letter so chaunged doeth stande, was put to death in that mo-neth which that letter doth signifie. And where as in the thirde

thirde verse (and no where els) theye standeth fygures on the righte side betwene the twoo lynes, that giueth to vnderstande, that Hunter, Highye, Picket, and Knight, which are placed in one lyne, were hyent in thyee sundrye dayes. The fygures, whiche standeth in the litle square place, on the lefte side of the boke, is but the sum of the verses. But those which stande betwene the two lines, on the left side of the booke, signifieth the daye of the moneth, wherein that person or persones died, where agaynste those fygures stande, the fygures, whyche stande withoute both the lynes on the toppe of the righte syde, signifieth the Folio, or numbre of the sydes, but the figures whiche stande vnderneath the neither stryke, betwene the twoo lynes is the numbre of the persones murthered on that syde, thys is doen (gentle Reader) that thou shouldest vnderstande, the yere moneth, and day, wherin euerye person dyed (accordynge to the knowledge that I haue learned.) Also in some places, where you shall see, a name or names stande withoute figures, that signifieth the certayne daye to bee vnknowen. Some therefore, perchaunce wyll iudge muche rashnes in me to write with ignorannce: to whome with reuerence I answere, that as I receyued the names registred, and gathered, by a good gentleman, euen so (at a frendes delier) I haue putte theym in metre in this litle booke, thinking that by pleasauntnes of reading, & easines of prices they myghte be the more largely blowen & knowen: for my delier is that all menne shoulde participate thys my trauayle. And were the Authour and endightynge halfe so worthye as the matter, then woulde I moste earnestly wyshe and desyre that it myght bee conueyed and delyuered to the Queenes maiesties owne handes, wherein her grace mighte see what vnmercifull ministers had charge ouer the poore shepe, who wolnishely at theyr wylles deuoured the same. And also what ruyne and decay of her graces subiectes (that myghte haue beene) they haue broughte to paſſe, therein might her grace ſee as in a glaſſe, howe that blood thyrſtie generation, neither ſpared hoze headed & aun-cient age, which al men ought to honour, neyther youth, noz middle age, neither wyfe, noz widow, yongeman, noz tender virgins: but lyke the vnnaturall egges of Aſtiages that ty-raunte, deſtroye and ſpyll the blood of all, beſydes ſtockynge racking, and whippyng of the yonger ſoꝛte, whome ſhame woulde not ſuffer to kyll (as ſome are well ynoughe knowen) and I am not all together ignoꝛaunt. Should ſuch tyrannycall tragidies bee kept one houre from the handes of ſo

so noble and vertuous a gouer nesse, whose princelye and natural hart (I doubt not) shulde haue occasion thereby to be in both kindes bothe hearie and ioyfull, heauy for the innocent bloud spilt, but ioiful for ẏ the prayses of her God, & our God shalbe honoured therby, while the world doth endure. I dout whether her grace (inwardlye rapte vp wyth Paule & Jhon) in diuine science wyl brast out and say: Oh happy Latymer, Cranmer, Hoper, Rogers, Far rer, Tailer, Sanders, Philpot, Cardmaker, Bradford. &c. you membres of Christ, you faith-full fathers and preachyng pa-stours, you that haue not defiled your selues (with abhominacion) but haue washed your gargarmentes white in the bloud of the lambe, you that in fyrye tormentes with Steuen haue called vpon the name of youre redemer, and so finished youre lyues: you that now are clothed in white garmēts of innocency, with crownes of consolation, and palmes of victory, in your handes, folowyng the Lambe whether so euer he goeth. Or elles in anguishe of soule lyghtyngly say, oh thou tyrannous and vnmercyfull world, thou monstrous & vnnaturall generation, what deuyl inflamed thy mynde wyth such malicious mischiefe to torment and shedde the bloude of suche innocent lyuers, perfect preachers, and worthye counceloures, learned ministers, diligent tigent diuines, perfecte personages, and faythfull shepherdes, they were constant confessours before, but thou (with the Romain Emperour) thoughtest to preuent the determi-nacion of god, in making them martyrs, to be the sooner with their Christe, whome they so muche talked of, oh cruell Ne-roes that coulde kyll (through malice) suche worthye men, as haue often preached to oure deare father, and brother, the euerlasting ghospell of GOD.

Coulde neyther honourable age, innocent syngle lyfe, chast matrimonye, inuiolate virginitie, nor yet pitie moue you to cease sheadyng of bloude (alas so muche vnnaturalnes) whether the sighte of thys symple booke, I saye, shoulde bryng to her graces naturall heart the passions of heauines or ioye (I doubte) but I thynke rather both. Therfore would to God it weare worthy to enter into the hands of so noble and naturall a Princes and Queene, whom the Lord of his eternal and foreseyng determination, hath now placed in this royal dignitie, to the redresse of such vnnatural and bloudy factes, as in thys booke are contayned. But for asmuch as some imperfection is (and may easily be) in this gathering, I commende it to thy goodnes (gentle reader) beseechyng thee not to bee to precise in perusynge the daye, for it maye bee that eyther through my negligence or or some other wrytyng before me, we may mysse so narrow a matte, suche as it is, I commende vnto thee, onely Iudge well.

BRITISH MUSEUM

The booke to the Reader.

PEruse with patience, I thee praye, My symple style, and metre base,
The workes of GOD, wyth wisedome waye The force of loue, the strength of grace.

Loue caused GOD, his grace to giue To suche as shoulde, for hym be slayne Grace wrought in theym, while thei did liue For loue to loue, their Christ agayne.

Now grace is of, such strength and might That nothing may, the same withstande Grace putteth death, and hell to flight And guydes vs, to the liuyng lande.

The force of loue, also is suche That feare and payne, it doeth expell Loue thynketh nothyng, ouer muche Loue doth all earthly thynges excell.

Thus loue and grace, of GOD began To worke in them, to dooe hys wyll These vertues force, wrought loue in man That feare was past, theyr bloude to spyll.

Our wished welth, hath brought vs peace Our ioy is full, our hope obtayned The blasing brandes, of fier doe cease The sleayng swoorde, also restrayned The simple shepe, preserued from death, By our good queene, Elizabeth.

1558.

As hope hath here, obtained herp say By goddes good will, and prouidence So trust doth truely, looke for aye Through his heauenly influence That greate Golia, shall be put to death
By our good Queene Elizabeth.

That goddes trew worde shall placed be The hungrie soules, for to sustaine That perfite loue, and vnitie Shalbe set in, their seate agayne That no more good men, shalbe put to deth Seing God hath sent, Elizabeth.

Pray we therfore, both night & day For her highnes, as we bee bounde O lorde preserue, this braunche of bay And all her foes, with force confounde Vere long to lyue, and after death Receyue our queene, Elizabeth.
Amen.

Apoc 6

How long tariest thou (O Lorde) holy and trewe, to iudge and auenge oure blood, on them that dwell on the earth.

The

The wishes, of the wise, whiche long, to be at reste:
To GOD, with lifted iyes, Thei call, to be redreste.

When shal this time, of trauail cease which we with wo sustayne, whē shal the dates, of rest & peace Returne to vs agayne.

When shall the minde, bee moued right To leaue hys lustyng life when shall our mocions, and delight Be free from wrath and strife.

When shall the tyme, of wofull teares bee moued vnto myrth, when shall the aged, with gray heares Reioyce at childrens byrth.

When shall Hierusalem reioyce, In him that is their kyng:
And Sion hill, with cheresull voyce Synge Psalmes, with triumphyng.

When shall the walles, erected bee That foes, with furie fraye when shall that perfect, slyue tree Geue odour, like the baye.

When shall the vineyard, bee restorde That beastlye Bores, devour when shall the people, late abhorde Receyue a quiet houre.

When shal the spirite, more feruent be In vs that want good wyll, when shall thy mercies, set vs free From wickednesse and yll.

when shall the Serpents, that surmise To poyson thine electe, Be bounde to better exercise,
Or vtterly retrete.

when shall the bloude, revenged be, which on the earth is shed when shall synnes sinke iniquitie Be calde into the bed.

When shall that mainy bt Synne appeare To bee euen as he is,
When shal thy babes, and children dere Receyue eternall blisse.

When shall that painted, hoze of Rome Be cast vnto the grounde, When shal her children haue their dome Which vertue woulde confounde.

When shall thy spouse, and turtle doue Be free from bitter blame, When shal thy grace, our sinnes remoue With pardon at the lame.

When shal this lyfe translated bee From foztunes fickell fall, When shall true faith, and equitie Remaine in generall.

When shall contention, and debate Foz euer slake and ceale, When shall the dates, of euill date Be tourned vnto peace.

when shall trew dealing, rule the roste With those that lyue and sell, And single minde, in euery coaste Among vs bide and dwell.

when shall our mindes, wholy conuert From wealth, and worldlye gayne: when shall the crouynges, of our harte From wickednes refrayne.

when shall this flesche, retourne to dust From whence the same did spryng when shal the shall of our tryst, Appeare with triumphyng.

When shē shal the trumps, blow out his blast And thy dere babes reuiue, when shal the boare, be beanlong cast That sought vs to depryue.

when shall thy Christ, our kyng appeare with power and renowne: when shall thy saintes, that suffer here Receyue their p:omest crowne.

When shall the faithfull, firmely stande Before thy face to dwell:
When shall thy foes, at thy lyfte hande, Be caste into ths hell.

Apoca. 22.
Come Lorde Iesu.
